About FPF The Food Packaging Forum's overall objective is to make scientific facts and expert opinions about food contact materials and health issues accessible to all stakeholders. The Food Packaging Forum is an independent, charitable non-profit organization. We communicate high-quality scientific information and enable a balanced dialogue on the issue of healthy food contact materials.

Workshop
Food packaging and chemical safety:
What does the future hold?

8 October 2015

Four Points by Sheraton
Sihlcity, Kalandergasse 1, Zurich, Switzerland

About the workshop The Food Packaging Forum's third annual workshop takes a look at scientific trends and expected developments in the area of food contact materials and chemical safety. Participants and speakers from regulatory authorities, industry, and academia, as well as from public interest groups, will gather to discuss the issue of chemical migration from food contact materials and impact on health. We will address today's perspectives, look at historical developments in analytical chemistry and chemical risk assessment, and share insights on scientific challenges and future innovation that have the potential to impact the field. Please register before October 1, 2015.
